I don't fully understand why the antitrust suit was served to begin with. I've worked with computers for 20 years. Bill Gates is just a genius. Just because he and his company can create the BEST systems and software in the world, does not mean he has to be punished. I agree that it would help competition for software if the Windows Operating System was not limited to what can run on it. Also, I agree that he should not have "forced" those outside entities to only do business with Microsoft products. However, I have seen what running different software packages on a Windows OS can do to the system. It can limit functionality of the entire system and can cause system errors and shutdowns. I believe some changes need to be made in the market, but putting all the blame on Bill Gates for being the genius he is is not the answer.

Thank you,
